About the program...

Research indicates kids are more stressed than ever before, that expectations have a tremendous influence on children, and that students show up for school with many risk factors that impact their chances for life-long success.

Teachers, counselors, parent outreach staff, childcare providers, and parents themselves will:

- learn strategies to create a culture among teachers, parents and students that builds self esteem and supports timeless values;
- hear what the proper expectations are, who sets them and learn how to make expectations reasonable, achievable and clear.
- and receive critical information and an action plan to facilitate the development of resilience and character among children and youth.

Meets CCL Guidelines Requirements for:

- Guidance and Discipline
- Professional Development
- Responsive Caregiving
- Teacher-Child Interaction

About the Speaker...

Stacey DeWitt is a sought-after speaker and author. More than 80 audiences nationwide have heard her speak on today's ethical and character development challenges: parents struggling to raise resilient children, educators charged with professional development and teaching character in the classroom, and employers focused on providing ethical leadership for the young adults in the workforce and supporting work-life balance for their employees.

As a documentary producer, CEO and child advocate she brings a unique mix of research, real-life stories, passion, and multi-media to her presentations. Most importantly, as a mother of two teens, DeWitt provides a first-hand compassionate and humorous perspective.
